It's tough being a goblin.

As if the Grignak Spiders and Klastraa birds weren't enough to worry about, there's always the constant threat of being blown up by your neighbors. It's not that goblins are malicious, they are just too curious for their own good. This curiosity, mixed with their innate tendency to hoard just about anything they can get their hands on, has led to a boom in the storage industry. Turnover is often high, and when a garage's fee hasn't been paid for a few months, it is common practice to sell the contents in an auction.

Auctions with hidden agendas.

The players are all goblins attending the garage auctions at Gobo Storing Places, Inc. Each garage consists of cards from the main deck. Each player will be able to peek at a Card from the garage before the auction begins. Crafty goblins will watch their opponents carefully and attempt to determine their interest in the garage...but watch out for bluffs! Lucky goblins can win good stuff, like old tires or bags of trash, or even powerful magical artifacts! Unlucky entrepreneurs may find things, like soap or kittens! And if a goblin collector or zoologist happens to wander by, you can bet those items will be in high demand!

Strike it rich or strike out trying.

Go forth and strike it rich! The goblin with the greatest valued hoard at the end of the game wins! Just watch out for the Grignak spiders...and the Klastraa nests...and errant magic...and explosives...and....
